

May 16, 2008

The Office of Research on Women's Health presents an NIH Community Forum:

Seeking New Dimensions and Strategies for Women's Health Research: Recognizing the Contributions of Our Bodies, Ourselves

FRIDAY, MAY 16, 11:30 A.M. – 12:30 P.M.
LIPSETT AUDITORIUM, NIH CLINICAL CENTER

Participate in an NIH Community Forum on the Future of Women's Health Research, sponsored by the ORWH and the Coordinating Committee on Research on Women's Health (CCRWH).

You are invited to join in the discussion: what is the status of women's health research and where is it going? Help in the planning process for the 21st Century agenda on women's health!

Featuring special guest speaker Anne S. Kasper, Ph.D. – contributing author to the groundbreaking publication Our Bodies, Ourselves, founding member of the U.S. Women's Health Movement, and organizer and chair of the Maryland Women's Coalition for Health Care Reform – who will discuss “Our Bodies, Ourselves' and the Women's Health Movement: the past, present, and future roles of advocacy organizations in setting priorities for women's health research.”

Anne S. Kasper, Ph.D.

