And its commitment to equality, self-determination, and advancing health and human rights for women and girls

Congratulations on 40 Years of Progress.
Welcome to the 40th Anniversary Symposium for “Our Bodies, Ourselves.” Just as it takes a village to raise a child, it has taken hundreds – if not thousands – of people and organizations to midwife the nine editions of this landmark publication as well as four decades of educational and advocacy work. OBOS – as the book is affectionately called by many – is now in many corners of the world, and today we will hear from some of our global partners about how they have transformed this book to meet the needs of women and girls in their own regions.

Our Bodies, Ourselves has always been more than just a book. It is emblematic of a women’s health movement committed to principles of feminism as well as social, economic, and racial justice for all. We can certainly point to many successes over the past few decades, but we also have new challenges and persistent obstacles that will keep us all busy for years to come.

As you listen to our speakers today, do think about what role YOU can play to further enhance the health and human rights of women and girls – and support organizations like OBOS and our global partners in our efforts to protect women and girls and promote gender equality and justice around the world.

- Sign up today for Our Bodies, Our Blog and follow us on Facebook and Twitter, so that you can help others become better informed when to take important action.
- Join a group working on an issue that you care about.
- Make a financial contribution to OBOS and our global partners. You could also fundraise online or host a fundraising party for your colleagues and friends.

We look ahead now to our organization’s enormous challenges – surviving in tough economic times, “passing the torch” to new leadership, and making sure that we all have a voice in the public policies shaping our lives. We look forward to hearing from you and greatly appreciate your involvement and support.

Catherine Annas
Catherine is Director of the Eastern Massachusetts Healthcare Initiative, where she oversees projects on patient safety, quality and cost in health care. She has been on the Our Bodies Ourselves Board of Directors since 2008 and chairs the Our Bodies Ourselves Policy and Global Initiative Committees. She received her law degree from the Columbus School of Law at the Catholic University of America in 1995.

George Annas
George is Chair of the Department of Health Law, Bioethics & Human Rights at the Boston University School of Public Health, and Professor in the schools of medicine and law. He is co-founder of Global Lawyers and Physicians, a transnational association that promotes human rights and health, and author or editor of 16 books on health law and bioethics, the rights of patients, and American bioethics.

Byllye Avery
Byllye is the founder of the Avery Institute for Social Change and the Black Women’s Health Imperative. She is also a co-founder of Raising Women’s Voices for the Health Care We Need. The winner of the prestigious MacArthur Foundation Genius award, she has dedicated the last 30 years to leading and inspiring action on the human and reproductive rights of women and girls.

Zobeida Bonilla
Zobeida is a medical anthropologist currently at the University of Minnesota School of Public Health. She has developed the Our Bodies Ourselves curriculum for promotoras de salud based on “Nuestros Cuerpos, Nuestras Vidas,” coordinated efforts to train Latinas as promotoras, and prepared the Spanish translation and adaptation of “Journey to Parenthood” by Childbirth Connection.

Codou Bop
Codou is a Sénégalese activist for women’s human rights and democracy. Based in Dakar, she is the Coordinator for the Groupe de Recherche sur les Femmes et les Lois au Sénégal and a member of the African Feminist Forum. She has published extensively on women’s reproductive health, sexuality and access to land, as well as homophobia, gender-based violence, migration and citizenship.

Ayesha Chatterjee
Ayesha’s leadership at Our Bodies Ourselves has facilitated the development and in-country use of 12 cultural adaptations of “Our Bodies, Ourselves.” Prior to joining the team in 2006, she worked as a sexuality counselor in India and served briefly as a consultant to CARE in Tajikistan. She also serves on the Board of the Eastern Massachusetts Abortion Fund and is a DONA-trained postpartum doula.

Christine Cupaiuolo
Christine has been writing, editing and consulting for print and digital publications since 2000, following her award-winning work as a newspaper reporter. She is the Managing Editor of the 2011 edition of “Our Bodies, Ourselves” and has covered women’s health and public policy for Our Bodies, Our Blog since 2006.

Shamita Das Dasgupta

She is also past President of the European Health Psychology Society (EHPS) and EHPS Representative to the United Nations. She co-founded the Women’s Health Initiative in Bulgaria, which published a Bulgarian adaptation of “Our Bodies, Ourselves” in 2001.

Dana Weinberg
Dana, the founder and Director of Women and Their Bodies, is an Israel Venture Network Social Entrepreneur Fellow. She has a Master’s degree in Anthropology from Hebrew University. She has also served as Director of the School for Political Leadership for Women at Wizo in Jerusalem and Coordinator of the Lafer Center for Women and Gender Studies.

Sally Whelan
A co-founder of Our Bodies Ourselves, Sally directs the organization’s Global Initiative, where her leadership and guidance has resulted in the development and in-country use of 17 cultural adaptations of “Our Bodies, Ourselves” around the world. In 2004, Sally received Public Citizen’s Public Interest Service Award, established to recognize ‘unsung heroes’ in the public interest movement.
Welcome to our 40th Anniversary Symposium – an event celebrating 40 years of Our Bodies Ourselves (the organization and the book) and the Our Bodies Ourselves Global Network, a vibrant and growing international coalition of social change activists.

We have come a long way from our origin as a Boston-based collective talking around the kitchen table, to a thriving global presence with a place “at the table” – alongside other power-brokers – in countries around the world. Here is how it all started four decades ago.

In the 1970’s, as the “Our Bodies, Ourselves” book was becoming a best seller in the United States, publishers and women’s groups in Europe were the first to claim it as a resource for their countries. This resulted in early editions of the book in Italy, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Sweden, Netherlands and Spain, followed by others in Russia, Egypt, South Africa, China, Japan and Israel. There was no looking back!

At the time, it was founding co-author Norma Swenson who led the global outreach, working on early editions in Europe, building relationships and exploring new opportunities in Latin America, Asia and Africa, and championing a program dedicated to our growing network and global vision. With the programmatic foundation and relationships Norma developed, projects well underway in Thailand, China and Senegal, and the transitional leadership provided by Jennifer Yanco, we created the Our Bodies Ourselves Global Initiative in 2001 – then called the Global Translation/Adaptation Program.

Since then, we have partnered with women in Armenia, Serbia, Bulgaria, Poland, Moldova, Albania, South Korea, Russia, Israel, Nigeria, Tanzania, Turkey, India and Nepal, providing the technical assistance and support they need to translate and adapt “Our Bodies, Ourselves” into materials reflective of their unique social, political, and religious context and to bring evidence-based, culturally meaningful health resources to women, girls and men in their country.

Materials based on “Our Bodies, Ourselves” are now available in over 25 languages and in different formats – from posters and badges, books and booklets to e-books and multilingual websites. Our global partners have distributed content to rural areas via motorbikes and created campaigns targeting young urbanites. They have led trainings with village hairdressers and workshops with policy movers and shakers. We are honored to collaborate with the tenacious and visionary women and men behind these transformative projects and delighted to have many of them here with us on this historic day.

Today, you will have an opportunity to listen to the extraordinary journeys of some of our partners – starting from when they first came together around “Our Bodies, Ourselves,” forged a new language for women’s bodies and sexuality, built networks and identified the pressing health needs of their communities, secured local buy-in for their vision, and developed creative ways to ensure widespread access to their resources.

Through their projects, they have reached millions with vital information and inspired social action in every geographic region, and they have engaged grassroots and institutional power-brokers to help move the health and human rights of women and girls off the back burner.

This is the Our Bodies Ourselves Global Network – a coalition of more than 22 groups that exemplifies movement building in the 21st Century.

We hope you will be inspired by their stories. We hope you will celebrate their successes. We hope you will join us to blaze a trail for another 40 years.

It’s here!

The 9th edition of “Our Bodies, Ourselves” – in the works for over two years – has literally just been published, and as a symposium attendee, you’ll be among the first to see it.

The newly revised and updated edition, which focuses on women’s reproductive health and sexuality, includes dozens of personal stories and essential, up-to-date information about sexual orientation, gender identity, birth control, sexually transmitted infections, abortion, pregnancy and birth, perimenopause and menopause, health issues such as breast and ovarian cancers, and sexual health as we age. The book also addresses changes brought about by health care reform, the impact of toxics on reproductive health, and social networking strategies we can use to advocate for policies that improve women’s lives.

For the first time ever, an entire chapter, Relationships, is based mainly on women’s conversations. It is both an ode to OBOS’s roots and a reflection of today’s technologies: The text is a condensed version of a month-long, online dialogue involving more than three dozen women who asked and answered questions of each other with wisdom, encouragement and support.

Other firsts: the cover features headshots of 52 readers who submitted their photos along with reflections on what they learned from “Our Bodies, Ourselves” over the years. And this edition also includes profiles of our global network partners who have adapted “Our Bodies, Ourselves” for the own communities.

Creating a book of this size and scope, one that provides evidence-based information and addresses the political, economic and social forces that shape women’s health, takes an incredible amount of work and collaboration. More than 300 women and men shared their knowledge and expertise to ensure the book’s accuracy and comprehensiveness. Special recognition is due to our extraordinary partners on the “Our Bodies, Ourselves” editorial team: Wendy Sanford, Amy Romano, Judy Norsigian, Ayesha Chatterjee and June Tsang. In addition, several expert contributors took on the lion’s share of writing and revising at least one chapter: Susan Blank, Joan Ditzion, Marjorie Greenfield, Mara Kardas-Nelson, Heidi Moore, Lin Nelson, Marcie Richardson, Gary Richwald, Ellen Shaffer, Jocelyn Sims, Evelina Sterling, Kirsten Thompson, and Susan Yanow.

We are delighted to celebrate the release of the new book at today’s symposium. We invite you to join us at book events in various cities, where you can meet contributors and discuss the state of women’s health in the United States and worldwide. For event information, visit ourbodiesourselves.org/about/calendar.

Kiki Zeldes  Christine Cupaiuolo
Senior Editor  Managing Editor
In its early years, the Boston Women’s Health Book Collective (now known as Our Bodies Ourselves) collaborated with Leonor Taboada and Raquel Scherr Salgado to produce the first Spanish translation, “Nuestros Cuerpos, Nuestras Vidas” (1977, 1979). Foundation grants enabled the organization to self-publish about 50,000 copies that were distributed throughout the United States and Latin America. In 1982 Icaria Publishers produced an edition for Spain.

By the early 1980’s in Boston, a group of Latinas – Elizabeth MacMahon-Herrera, Maria Lourdes Mattei and Loly Carrillo – formed ALAS- Amigas Latinas en Accion Pro-Salud (Latina Friends in Action for Health). ALAS worked alongside OBOS as a sister organization as it produced the first Spanish language educational AIDS video in the U.S. Throughout the 1980’s and 1990’s, ALAS was dedicated to innovative community outreach on health – using pamphlets, radio, and street theater – mainly for the Latino community of Boston and, in later years, New Mexico.

Over time, ALAS affiliated itself with OBOS and was incorporated as a major program area, while supporting work on an ambitious Latin American translation and cultural adaptation of “Our Bodies, Ourselves” involving organizations throughout Latin America and the Caribbean. Directors and other key leaders in this project – including Rosie Munoz-Lopez, Mayra Canetti, Maria Morison Aguiar, Veronica Nielsen-Vilar and Ester Shapiro Rok – succeeded in synthesizing the work of activists and translators from visionary feminist and women’s health organizations throughout the region. Through a creative trialogue/trialogo between the U.S. text, collaboration with 19 women’s health groups from 11 countries in Central, North and South America, and the Caribbean, and the Boston Latina editorial team, “Nuestros Cuerpos, Nuestras Vidas” (Seven Stories Press, 2000) became a transnational edition for women of Latin American and Caribbean descent, wherever in the world we might be living. Our comadre Nirvana Gonzalez, then at Puerto Rico’s Taller Salud, now at Latin American Women’s Health Network/RSMLAC, offered critical guidance in getting to know the inspiring women, organizations, local and regional campaigns, Feminist Encuentros/Histories, and documents that informed and enriched an inviting activist text.

Following the publication of “Nuestros Cuerpos, Nuestras Vidas,” OBOS launched its Latina Health Initiative in 2001 under the direction of Zobeida Bonilla. The program’s focus was the development of a companion curriculum guide to “Nuestros Cuerpos, Nuestras Vidas” – Promotoras de Salud – now in use by peer health educators in training programs across the U.S. and Latin America. More recently, the aim of the program has been to distribute Spanish language materials through electronic and social media, including blog entries via www.ourbodiesourselves.org.

Throughout the decades, using formats from video and street theatre to print translation and cultural adaptation, these women – and other contributors listed below – have worked hard and passionately to address the health needs of Latinas in Boston and far beyond. We acknowledge them with deep respect and appreciation.

Singly and in groups, we …discussed the material…Sisters added their experiences, questions, fears, feelings, excitement. It was dynamic! We all learned together.

…the papers in and of themselves are not very important. They should be viewed as a tool which stimulates discussion and action, which allows for new ideas and for change…It was more important that we…were challenged by others’ experiences (often we came from very different situations), raised our questions, expressed our feelings, were challenged to act, than that we learned any specific body of material.

It was exciting to learn new facts about our bodies, but it was even more exciting to talk about how we felt about our bodies, how we felt about ourselves, how we could become more autonomous human beings, how we could act together on our collective knowledge to change the health care system for women and for all people. We hope this will be true for you too.

We want all your ideas, comments, suggestions, criticisms, etc.

Power to our sisters!
Congratulations on 40 years of continuously pathbreaking and courageous service to women around the world!

Forty years. Millions of lives changed. Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center congratulates Our Bodies Ourselves for four decades of work advancing the health and human rights of girls and women around the world. We are pleased that our support will make the new OBOS edition available to many of our community health center patients.

Wendy: Congratulations to my favorite sister. You have made us all so proud. —Copey, Susan, and Peter

Congratulations and thank you, amazing women, Judy and Dr. Mary – the dream came true - twice - through your vision and life-long dedication to helping women! What an honor to support OBOS in Armenia, our ancestral homeland, with Armenian women’s music! —Margot Dilmaghani, New York

Congratulations, Felicidades and Mazel Tov to my OBOS-Founder-Sisters who for 40 years have passionately and tirelessly worked to improve women’s lives here and around the world. With admiration and affection, Vilunya Diskin

Eastern Bank sincerely congratulates Our Bodies Ourselves on the 40th anniversary of its landmark book, which continues to provide valuable information to millions of readers about women’s health, reproduction and sexuality.

When “Our Bodies Ourselves” exploded on to the scene 40 years ago it was like a body map, mirroring and guiding women through their deepest selves and choices. It was as if women’s bodies finally existed. 40 years later it is just as relevant. —Eve Ensler, Author of The Vagina Monologues and Founder of V-Day

The First Unitarian Society in Newton (FUSN) is proud to co-
sponsor this Symposium and to recognize an organization that has informed, reassured and empowered women for 40 years. We make this contribution in special honor of the late Pamela Morgan, a FUSN member who worked for OBOS over several decades.

Gynuity Health Projects is a research and technical assistance organization that works globally to ensure that reproductive health technologies are widely available at reasonable cost, provided in the context of high-quality services, and offered in a way that recognizes the dignity and autonomy of each individual. We share with OBOS a commitment to the health and human rights of women and girls everywhere. —Beverly Winikoff, MD

The Women and Health Initiative at the Harvard School of Public Health congratulates Our Bodies Ourselves on its 40th anniversary, with special thanks to its founders, current leaders, and global partners for their undaunted commitment to improving women’s health worldwide. As a Latin American woman and reproductive health professional, I can’t emphasize enough how strongly your book influenced my career and personal life! —Ana Langer, MD, Women and Health Initiative, Harvard School of Public Health

From my youth in the Boston area and its very earliest versions, the book “Our Bodies Ourselves” has meant a great deal to me personally. In addition, the work of the Collective/ OBOS, particularly internationally, has inspired me professionally. Congratulations and best wishes to everyone involved for 40 more years of success in changing knowledge, attitudes, and lives! —Judith Helzner

Ipas is an international NGO working in more than 30 countries around the world to increase women’s ability to exercise their sexual and reproductive rights, especially the right to safe abortion. We proudly collaborate with Our Bodies Ourselves to ensure that no woman should have to risk her life, her health, her fertility, her well-being or the well-being of her family because she lacks reproductive health care.

Thank You! Our Bodies Ourselves for pioneering the way forward for women’s health and well-being. Our democracy is more vibrant when women’s voices are heard. —Barbara Lee MIT Medical is proud to support the fortieth anniversary of the groundbreaking book, “Our Bodies Ourselves.” We recognize the significance of knowledge as power and salute the importance of this phenomenally comprehensive book on women’s health.

MIT Women’s and Gender Studies congratulates Our Bodies Ourselves for all you have accomplished. From your local beginnings to your global initiatives, we support you.

The Ms. Foundation for Women salutes Our Bodies Ourselves on the celebration of forty years advancing women’s health and human rights. We wish you the best in continuing your legacy and serving today’s and tomorrow’s generations of women and their communities.

The Nation, a progressive publication since 1865, salutes OBOS on the historic occasion of its 40th anniversary! Your legacy of activism, outreach and community building established a firm foundation upon which we’re all standing today.

Our Bodies Ourselves is the sourcebook for women’s health, wellbeing and self-care. It is accessible, comprehensive, well written, and smart. Population Council staff members around the world are delighted to celebrate the many contributions that this book—which is brilliant in its content and its approach—has made to millions of women’s and girls’ lives. —Peter J. Donaldson, President, The Population Council

Congratulations and thanks to Our Bodies Ourselves for working tirelessly and effectively on women’s health issues for over four decades. You are women of vision and action, and the impact you’ve had on women’s health, health care more broadly, and social change, is incalculable and inspiring. Special congratulations to our dear friend, Judy Norsigian, for her leadership and incomparable advocacy. With much admiration and appreciation for all that OBOS does and for all that is yet to come. —Joan Rachlin and Seymour Small

We honor Judy Norsigian, the staff – past and present, and the global partners of OBOS for maintaining the belief that information is power. OBOS has been the most essential health guide in our work and to woman all over the world. Where would we have been without it? —Deborah and Vassilios Raptopoulos

Ester Shapiro Rok and Alan West-Durán wishing OBOS and NCNV many decades more transforming women’s health and lives. Gracias for all you do.

The University of Michigan Health System, including the Women’s Health Program and the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, is grateful for OBOS’ 40 years of educational and service leadership for women (and men) and will continue to be proud to use OBOS in its clinical and educational programs. —Timothy R.B. Johnson, MD, Department Chair of Obstetrics and Gynecology

In memory of Lilly Weitz. —Rose Weitz
The Women's Studies Research Center (WSRC) at Brandeis University congratulates OBOS on 40 years of visionary women and health advocacy. WSRC is an innovative, interdisciplinary research facility where scholars study, create art, and conduct activist projects focused on gender issues and women’s lives. Its collegial environment welcomes international scholars and fosters unexpected collaborations that often combine research, art, and activism.

In loving memory of Cynthia K. McLachlan, founder of Girl's Best Friend Foundation, and a passionate advocate and philanthropic leader for girls and women. Known for her grit and grace, she opened doors and raised some eyebrows. Her work lives on in those she touched.

—Gary Tabasinske
The Milbank Memorial Fund congratulates Our Bodies Ourselves on its 40th year of enhancing the health and well-being of women and girls across the globe.
